

Women Must Save Liberty, Says Mrs. Catt

Men Never Have Been Able to Oppose Autocracies, She Tells Suffragists

Fears People Won't Stick

Expects That "One of Six Kaiserlets Will Creep Out of His Hole Somewhere"

Special to The Tribune
ALBANY, Dec. 3.—The women voters of the world must lend a helping hand to the new democracy of Europe. Without their history will repeat itself in a reaction from the high hopes following the war. Without them the autocracies of Europe may undermine the new democracies.

This was the message, and the call to action, which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt delivered to the suffragists of New York State at their annual convention here today.

"It would be a fine trick—a trick quite worthy of the Kaiser," said Mrs. Catt, "to allow the people of Germany to form a new government and sign the peace treaty, and then overthrow that government. No power on earth could then enforce the treaties."

"The people of Europe are excited and zealous for democracy, but they aren't going to stick to it. The people who will stick are those who can get something out of a waiting game. Not the Kaiser himself, perhaps, but one of his Kaiserlets will creep out of his hole somewhere. I'm sure of that."

What No Men Have Done
"This is the time for the women of the world to do what no men have done for men. The only possible anticote for another world war is a democracy that will 'democ' you. You can't make me believe that the people of Europe can establish democracies overnight without help and encouragement from the organized democracies of the world. No men have ever done this. The fruits of Waterloo, as Dr. Baerentzen calls it, were the seeds of the new democracies, and the democracies did not get together."

Women voters must organize to do this thing," she continued. "We must send lecturers to the new democracies of Europe to tell them the bright side of our national life. We must convince the nations of the world that we are not only big, but we are also good. We must publish them abroad. The united millions of the women voters of the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Norway, Denmark and Finland will produce a power which cannot be made its way even against a united European Toryism."

Voters and Non-Voters
The International Woman Suffrage Alliance will be reorganized into two groups of members, Mrs. Catt said—the voters and the non-voters. In each of the local organizations will be formed into councils of voters and non-voters.

"The first duty of the women voters of the United States at home must be," she continued, "to codify and standardize the laws of the country. The laws of the forty-eight states vary so that it is impossible for uneducated people to know their rights. It is a fact so simple that it needs no demonstration that if one section of the country is much behind the others in education and legal protection to women and children, a difference in influence throughout the whole country."

"Therefore it becomes the duty of all forward looking people to see that the laws of the country are unified and that the standard by which to measure the proper programme for each state is the code of laws of the most advanced states."

A commission of women lawyers will be established by the National American Woman Suffrage Association to carry on this codification of laws and to spread the knowledge of women of the country. They will also make a study of the election laws, with the intention of showing up the weakness and chances for corruption lurking in each.

To Be "The Pudding Stick"
"We shall be the pudding stick to stir up the men of each state to reform their own election laws," Mrs. Catt concluded.

The convention voted to endorse all these projects, in whatever definite form they shall crystallize at the conference of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which will be held early in 1919.

The suffragists then turned their attention to home affairs. They voted to support the prohibition amendment which is before the state legislature for ratification. They voted also to endorse the "woman's labor programme" especially a group of organizations, including the National Federation of Labor, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Consumers' League, the State Federation of Women's Clubs and the Women's Trade Union League.

The women's programme included an eight-hour day for women, the minimum wage, health insurance and protective laws for elevator girls, conductresses and office workers, and a fifty-four-hour week and no night work after 10 o'clock applying to all. They voted also, after a lively tilt, to endorse in theory, the remainder of the programme of the Federation of Labor, including "labor's bill of rights," but referred the specific laws to the state executive committee for study.

Mrs. Maude Swartz, chairman of the labor committee for the Woman's Suffrage party, thanked them.

"I'm glad you have not turned this programme down," she said, "not for the sake of the working women, but for your own. The working women have been looking to you middle class

Idle Women March Upon Lloyd George

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Women munition workers, who had been receiving high pay and who have been discharged, marched to Downing Street to-day and demanded to see Premier Lloyd George.

The Premier sent word that he was too busy to see them. The marchers, who numbered about five hundred, then proceeded to the Ministry of Munitions. Officials of the Ministry met a deputation of the women and arranged for a further conference, at which the employers also would be present.

The women in many instances wore expensive clothes. They demanded the immediate withdrawal of the discharges, and their attitude, it was said at the Ministry of Munitions, was uncompromising.

Women for years to help them as you had won the vote."

Mrs. Whitman Speaks

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman was the guest of the convention at the morning session. The Governor's wife made the first speech.

"It has been an inspiration to hear Mrs. Catt outline the new work that lies before us," she said. "There is some contention as to political defeat, since it will give me more opportunity to work with you all for these good causes."

Miss Mary Garrett Hay succeeded in having passed a resolution urging the women to enroll with the political parties of their choice. There was another lively discussion over this, the opposition led by Mrs. William Kellogg.

"Don't let George do it all," said Frank T. O'Connell, of Niagara Falls. "We want to get into politics to reform them from the ground up. We can't do anything unless we enroll and vote in the primaries."

Mrs. Ogden Reid, state treasurer, reported that the association had raised in the last year $29,310. For the Women's Overseas Hospital for New York State she reported that $10,000 more had been raised.

Mrs. Catt announced that the suffragists would continue to support the overseas hospitals in France for another six months. The military hospital in Nancy just behind the old firing line has been transferred to a refugee hospital, and the association is agent of the association sailed to-day to supervise the reorganization of the refugee hospital at La Bouheyre into a peace hospital.

Women Workers First Topic of Big Conference

Meeting to Discuss Reconstruction To Be Held in This City Dec. 6 and 7—Secretary Wilson Coming

Women in industry will be the first topic for discussion at the labor reconstruction conference to be held here December 6 and 7. The conference will be held under the auspices of the Academy of Political Science, and the first meeting will take place in the Horace Mann Auditorium of Columbia University. Mary E. Dreier will preside.

Mary Van Kleef, director of the women in industry service of the United States Labor Department, will speak on "Changes in Protective Standards." Other speakers will be Pauline Golden, of the United States women's service section of the United States railroad administration, on "Woman's railroad employment," Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, secretary of the United Textile Workers of America, on "Equal Pay for Equal Work," Mary Anderson, assistant director of the women in industry service, on "Will women better their lot in industry?" and "Return of Peace," and Dr. Alice Hamilton, United States Bureau of Standards, on "New Scientific Standards for the Protection of Workers."

At this banquet 1,200 guests are expected, many of them representing commercial and business organizations and labor unions all over the country. The importance of an expression of opinion and hope on behalf of the administration is recognized by Secretary Wilson, and as the President himself assured labor and business interests alike at the outbreak of the war that the Federal Government would be safeguarded by every power of the government if they cooperated patriotically and unselfishly in the vigorous prosecution of the war, the Secretary of Labor feels that the government should be equally solicitous in safeguarding those interests during the period of reconstruction.

Community Work To Give Women New Opportunity

One-Time War Organization Turns Its Activities to Leading in Service of All Kinds in Peace Days

The so-called woman of leisure who learned the joy of useful activity during the war and now wonders how she can avoid going back to tea and bridge, and the girl war worker who fears she is to be turned out of a job, will both find in the Community Council of National Defence.

Starting as a war organization, this great movement has become nationwide, with chief headquarters in Washington. He will now turn its energies to reconstruction problems.

The Community Councils of National Defence are local groups united under a Federal charter, with self-government, for the purpose of fostering a neighborhood spirit and drawing every honest citizen into some form of active activity.

Dr. John Willis Slaughter, director of the development of Community Councils of National Defence in the New York City, speaking of the objects of the councils, said yesterday: "Chiefly, we want to coordinate the work of demobilizing the army, of finding jobs for men and women workers, of assisting in the reorganization of service and women turned away from war activities."

The councils are a means of bringing every individual citizen into national service. They will be about 400 councils in New York City, each one having its own officers and working under a Federal charter issued at the organization headquarters, Room 2205, Municipal Building.

Each of these individual councils will have a list of members, members, catalogued according to capacities and abilities. In any crisis, such as the influenza epidemic, during which the community council is called upon to nurse, cook, wash, etc., we can immediately mobilize our working forces."

On the Screen

Madge Kennedy is one of the gifted women of the screen. She has a very definite conception of the value of slight gestures and small changes in the play of expression. Among the many players of stage and screen she knows best how to cry humorously.

She can do more with a dab of a handkerchief than some popular comedians do with a barrel of paint. But, of course, we do not mean Charlie Chaplin.

A Perfect Lady. By Channing Pollock and Bennett Wolf, does not bring out all Miss Kennedy's qualities, although it affords her an opportunity for a pleasing appearance. The story is moderately interesting, but marred by conventionalism. Some days when we are bored by a play, we take up a lantern and search for an honest deacon. He may be found, but naturally we will not seek for him in the movies or on the stage.

The villain of "A Perfect Lady" is the usual sort of deacon. When the heroine tries to live down a life spent in luxury, there is a scene in which she opens an ice cream cabinet and motion picture theatre he persecutes her. However, the minister marries her after the deacon has been exposed. The villain's end will be with him in the motion picture taken of him during a spree in a far-off city. The effect of the movie within a movie is well done and interesting. Walter Lang is a good villain, but the rest of the support furnished to Miss Kennedy is not distinguished.

James Montgomery Flagg's comedy "Penelope" (Fox) has a national plot which is decidedly in its favor and it is also amusing. Olin Howland does excellent work in this comedy, which is a life span of a man in a jumble of physical misfortunes.

Rex Beach's "Too Fat to Fight," with Frank McIntyre, begins the promise of an amusing comedy. Even though its life span is in the hands of a man, there is humor in the plight of the man who wants to fight and cannot on account of his excess flesh. His failure to gain place in the army is a comedy. An account of his fondness for cards and liquor is amusingly depicted, but when his case is reconsidered the picture turns propagandistic and comes a dull tract.

There is plenty of action once the hero reaches France, but it is not effective. The stout hero is sent into the front line trench on some sort of mysterious errand, and the picture is under the impression that the provisioning of men in the trenches was exclusively the task of the army and navy. The picture is not effective in the serious moments chiefly because they are devised without skill and produced with a maximum of sincerity to every hundred feet of film.

"Her First Mistake," the Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy, has some wonderful and amusing scenes, but it is well as some startling effects, but it is devoid of any continuous or coherent plot.

"Le Prophete" Repeated, With Caruso and Homer in Cast

"Le Prophete" was repeated last night at the Metropolitan before the usual large audience. The cast included Mr. Caruso, Mrs. Homer, Miss Caruso, Mr. Schlegel, Mr. Martindale and Mr. Rothert.

All were in excellent voice, and Mr. Rothert showed that he can conduct Meyerbeer with as much spirit as he can conduct Wagner. The Metropolitan's spectacle is a superb one, especially in the coronation scene, where the ballet possesses greater atmosphere than is usually the case at the opera.

It would none the less be a vast improvement if skaters could be found who knew on which and their next step was likely to land them.

German Colonel Dies While Under U. S. Parole

Major Piorkowski Promoted When Prisoner, Was Ranking Officer in This Country

Lieutenant Colonel Arthur E. Piorkowski, formerly American representative of the Krupp and the highest ranking officer of the German army in the United States, died Monday at his home of East Eighty-sixth Street.

On the day following the declaration of war against Germany by the United States the German officer, then a major, was arrested as an enemy alien. He was in custody two months, but on June 9, 1917, was paroled in the custody of Judge Henry D. Hotchkiss. He was seventy-eight years old at the time of his death.

Not only did he not sever his connection with the German army, but after this country entered the war and while he was on parole he was promoted from major to lieutenant colonel.

On August 18, 1914, just as the great war opened, he contributed an article to The Tribune in which he gave an accurate forecast of the method which would be pursued in the fighting and the gigantic scale of the military operation that would decide the war, but without undertaking to predict which side would be the victor.

Funeral services will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Peter's Lutheran Church, 1155 Fifth Street and Lexington Avenue.

Pearl Necklaces
FIFTH AVENUE at FORTY-SIXTH

As for Mr. Grainger's touch and tone, they were even a little more steady and brittle than before the war. His generously bestowed service has not improved them. The players upon violins proclaimed the spirit of the meeting in Grainger's fascinating setting of an Irish reel, "Molly on the Shore," but were considerably out of their depth in the tender melancholy of Dvorak's "American" quartet.
